OREGON.

An Albany merchant shipped 2,300 dozen eggs by the last steamer for San Francisco.

Elder Stayton, of Sublimity, Marion county, proposes to erect a flouring mill at that place during the coming summer.

Robert Mason has left Clackamas county with a mortgaged wagon. The mortgagee wants to know where Robert now is.

The flouring mills at McMinnville are both running under full head. Considerable grain has been bought during the week at the Bargesser mills. Seventy five cents per bushel was the price.

Some hoodlums at Amity raided on an Indian's ranch a few days ago, in the absence of Mr. "Lo," and got away with $30. The prodigality with which they dispensed the coin, led to their detection.

On last Sunday James Phillips, living on Dry Creek, Umatilla county, met with a severe loss. He was absent from home attending church, and his house caught fire and was consumed with all its contents.

Governor Grover, during the last week, appointed I. N. Smith, of Peoria, J. M. Morgan, of Halsey, Linn county, and A. J. Sturtivant, of Pilot Rock, Umatilla county, Notaries Public. All except Mr. Morgan were recommissioned.

The following is a statement of the business transacted at the Land Office at Oregon City during the month of March: 43 donation certificates, for 11,910 47 acres; 12 homestead entries, for 1,352 45 acres; 5 pre emption filings, for 890 80 acres.

On Wednesday His Excellency, the Governor, appointed James D. Walker, of Nehalem valley, a member of the Board of Commissioners of the Washington County, Nehalem Valley and Astoria Wagon Road, in the place of N. L. Coffinburg, resigned.

Kenney, on trial at Albany for murder, is prosecuted by Capt. Humphrey, District Attorney, assisted by Hon. G. R. Holm, and defended by Messrs. Dolph, Williams, Whitney and Dryden. The examination of witnesses was concluded at 11 A. M. yesterday.

The following are the permanent officers of the Yamhill Farmers' Club: President, Henry Hewitt; Vice Presidents, D. C. Stewart and A. B. Henry. Recording Secretary, W. Galloway; Corresponding Secretary, Geo. B. Curry; Treasurer, F. Martin.

A little son of Mr. Joseph Bernardi of Salem, was terribly injured on Thursday by being hit on the head by a sharp, heavy ax with which his brother was chopping wood. A gash was cut on the little fellow's forehead about three inches long, laying it open to the skull bone. He will probably recover.

The following delegates from Yamhill county to the State Farmers' Convention to be held at Salem April 10th were elected: Lafayette, J. H. Upton; McMinnville, D. B. Crawford; West Chehalem, J. Cyrus Nelson; North Yamhill, E. Laughlin; Dayton, Willis Starr; Willamette, A. J. Pitman, Sheridan, L. Potter; Amity, B. Springer; East Chehalem, S. Blucher.

It is said that some of the bright young men of Albany, who go to see the girls, have adopted a new and novel method of getting kisses. They assert, on the authority of scientific writers, that the concussion produced by a kiss will cause the flame of the lamp to flicker, and easily induce the girls to experiment in the interest of science. The first kiss or two the parties watch the flame to see if it flickers, but soon becomes so interested in the experiment as to let it flicker if it wants to.

Our Hillsboro correspondent sends the following local items: "A general moving, building and fencing is going on. The office of Dr. John Vito is to be moved on an adjacent lot. Dr. F. A. Bayley is soon to erect a large drug store in this place on a portion of the Masonic lot, bought by him. Sidewalks and shade trees are receiving careful attention. Judge Hyer Jackson will erect a large dwelling in town the coming summer. As is usual, we expect that mill men have not provided a sufficient amount of building material for the town demands."

A sensationally disposed correspondent of the Spirit of the West, writing from Pendleton, says: "A petition is being circulated in and around Pendleton to the Governor for arms to defend the whites against an outbreak of Indians, and is receiving the signatures of all to whom it is presented. The Indians here are becoming restless, and as their annuities are about to expire, it is very probable (provided Captain Jack receives a bounty for the scalps he has) that they will conclude to take a few scalps here, merely for pastime, and to supply their supply of blankets."

LETTER FROM HILLSBORO.

HILLSBORO, April 3, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Owing to the recent heavy rains all the people have to do, in Washington county, is to bake their shins by the fire and enquire after the news, and by the way, friend Wehring, agent for the Herald, and his two subscribers for that paper, after vainly gnawing at the rough bark of the litigious organ for two hours in the vain hope that a little sap might be obtained to support their mental faculties, suddenly awoke to the consciousness, that, they had read the same articles for days, and the only variation that the date of publication had been changed. The air is perfectly blue for a mile around, by the mingling of indignation with the atmosphere.

Now comes down that a letter published in the Forest Grove Independent, purporting to have been written at Cornelius, has created a speck of war in that part of the county. We are informed that the Corneliusites immediately indignated and proceeded to resolute, after which they appointed a committee to circulate said resolutions and present them to ye Independent boys. We understand that everything is to be published in due time, but for the life of me I can't see anything to get so very mad about. It is true, it is rather a dolorous epistle, but then it don't call anybody a "monopoly" (they that bring the fighting words in this county). It is sincerely hoped that so small a matter will be hushed up without further ado. We all think that our particular town, is going to be a second New York. Since this is a little comfort let's be magnanimous. If anybody was to call Forest Grove a volcano on account of her proximity to the mountains, I dare say she would call them a liar. Hillsboro has a Peace Commission trenting with them and don't want to fight. Let's have peace.

The farmers are growling that the rain is doing damage to their young crops, while stock men are looking anxious and careworn. The oldest inhabitant declares this to be as cold a rain as they ever knew. The wind is doing a great deal of damage to fencing and timber. Send us out a hatful of fair weather.

The agitation of the school question in Hillsboro is getting to be rather warm, and as the annual meeting comes off on next Monday the time is too short for me to make up my mind as to how I shall vote, but I am sure I am in favor of something, though just what it is I can't say.

Later news to day from the seat of war announces that Col. Cornelius, at the head of a select party, has besieged the Forest Grovesites in their lava bed, and with the sound of trumpet will summon them to an unconditional surrender. Reinforcements are expected from Forts Bull Run and Gleason, while the Tucker brush cavalry will turn the enemy's flank. A car load of flour was pushed from Hillsboro to the front to-day.

THE TERRITORIES.

Candidates for the municipal offices in Olympia are beginning to come to the surface in great numbers.

The Presbyterian church at Olympia is about to be enlarged and improved. A steeple is also to be erected.

Joseph Clothhill, of Salt Lake, swallowed his set of false teeth. It occasioned biting pains in his stomach. He died.

Mrs. Hugo, landlady of the Cosmopolitan Hotel, at Port Townsend, met with an accident a few days ago, and has since been confined to her bed from injuries received.

The Corinne Reporter of the 6th ult., says: The divide just north of us, known as the Malad range, is covered with snow to the depth of twenty or thirty feet, and, as would naturally be supposed, the Montana conch experienced great trouble in crossing it.

A Montana paper says: Utah and Idaho boast two feet of snow on the level. The Malad range at the Northern stage crossing, has about twenty feet of snow on the level. How different in Montana—valleys in the attire of spring, and mountain sides and table lands sprouting with bunch grass verdure.

The bark Forest Queen from San Francisco, arrived at Port Townsend, Sunday morning, the 30th ult., being out only six days. The Queen had 150 tons of freight for Sound ports, and brought as passengers, Mrs Stores and daughter, Fred. Stores, Wm. Stores, Mr. Hunter, N. Oliver, and Geo. H. Hansell.

The Helena Herald of the 20th ult., says: A telegram was received by Mr. Child yesterday from O. J. Salisbury, at Summit, stating that it is impossible for him to get the mails through on time for the present, as the epizoo continues to rage among the horses of the line in Southern Montana and Idaho.

The proprietors of the Dayton, W. T., Woolen Mills expect to complete their factory and put it in successful operation some time during the present year, and the Walla Walla and Columbia River Railroad Company intend to complete their road (narrow gauge) in time to carry off the products of the coming harvest.

Mr. Fred Dyer was up before Justice Smith, of Seattle, on the 21th ult., on the charge of keeping his saloon open on Sunday, contrary to law. Dyer escaped conviction on the score of having "put up a job" to deceive any one who might be watching, by having parties go through the motions of buying and drinking liquors, when in reality nothing of the kind was done. The result was that the county had a large cost bill saddled upon it.

Secretary Delano, of the Interior Department, writes W. W. Belknap, Secretary of War, saying that all persons on the Ute reservation in Colorado, are, in his opinion, wrongfully there, and should be removed therefrom. He therefore requested that the proper officers of the War Department be directed to notify the intruders that they must leave the reservation on or before the first day of April, 1873, and that at the expiration of that period, if they still remain, the order for their removal will be promptly enforced.

Benjamine F. Potts, Governor of the Territory of Montana, by virtue of the authority vested in him by the organic act of said Territory, has ordered that the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Montana, convene in extraordinary session at Virginia City, the Capital of said Territory, on Monday, the 14th day of April, A. D. 1873, at 12 o'clock, the meridian of said day, to consider such subjects of legislation as will be submitted by the Executive, or such as are demanded by the public interests.

An accident recently occurred on the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, occasioned by a severe wind storm. The passenger train going south had reached Henry's station, on the south side of the Divide, when it was caught in a violent whirlwind that came down from the mountains carrying a cloud of dust and small stones. The rear car of the train was lifted from the track and set off on an inclined bank so that it tilted over. Several of the passengers were slightly bruised; no other injuries were sustained.

The shipments of merchandise to Montana from San Francisco during the past year are stated to have been as follows: Sugar, 400,000 pounds; syrup, 20,000 gallons; coffee, 150,000 pounds; tea, 20,000 pounds; dried fruits, 200,000 pounds; green fruits, 100,000 pounds; California canned goods, including pickles, 20,000 packages; wines and liquors, 20,000 gallons; beans, 150,000 pounds; rice, 200,000 pounds; oil gars, 1,500,000. Besides the articles enumerated, it is reported that there is an increasing demand for wooden ware, powder, quicksilver, saddles, harness, buck gloves, boots, blankets and clothing of California manufacture.

A correspondent at Waitsburg, W. T., says: Our people are very busy with their spring work. Judging by their activity, it is safe to conjecture that the crops of the coming harvest will far out strip all former ones in this valley. The hard times through which we are now passing has had the effect of stirring up the people of this county to greater activity. They are beginning to learn that their prosperity depends more upon their industry, frugality and economy, than upon the doubtful chances of 'good luck.' Consequently, they are organizing themselves into a Farmers Club, talking of factories to work up the surplus productions of the country, of railroads, to convey their produce to a steady and unfailing market, etc. Some of these schemes are fast assuming a tangible and practicable shape.

Now comes down that a letter published in the Forest Grove Independent, purporting to have been written at Cornelius, has created a speck of war in that part of the county. We are informed that the Corneliusites immediately indignated and proceeded to resolute, after which they appointed a committee to circulate said resolutions and present them to ye Independent boys. We understand that everything is to be published in due time, but for the life of me I can't see anything to get so very mad about. It is true, it is rather a dolorous epistle, but then it don't call anybody a "monopoly" (they that bring the fighting words in this county). It is sincerely hoped that so small a matter will be hushed up without further ado. We all think that our particular town, is going to be a second New York. Since this is a little comfort let's be magnanimous. If anybody was to call Forest Grove a volcano on account of her proximity to the mountains, I dare say she would call them a liar. Hillsboro has a Peace Commission trenting with them and don't want to fight. Let's have peace.

The farmers are growling that the rain is doing damage to their young crops, while stock men are looking anxious and careworn. The oldest inhabitant declares this to be as cold a rain as they ever knew. The wind is doing a great deal of damage to fencing and timber. Send us out a hatful of fair weather.

The agitation of the school question in Hillsboro is getting to be rather warm, and as the annual meeting comes off on next Monday the time is too short for me to make up my mind as to how I shall vote, but I am sure I am in favor of something, though just what it is I can't say.

Later news to day from the seat of war announces that Col. Cornelius, at the head of a select party, has besieged the Forest Grovesites in their lava bed, and with the sound of trumpet will summon them to an unconditional surrender. Reinforcements are expected from Forts Bull Run and Gleason, while the Tucker brush cavalry will turn the enemy's flank. A car load of flour was pushed from Hillsboro to the front to-day.

EASTERN DATES TO APRIL 4.

WASHINGTON CITY.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The Commissioner General of the Land Office to-day decided the case of the State of California against Close, Mason, Juan Perez, William Hawes and others on appeal from the San Francisco District, and involving the right of said parties, as pre emptionists, to enter certain lands which the State claimed to have been assigned to it as school lands. The decision of the local land officers regarding Hawes is reversed, and his right to pre emption entry recognized. Their decision, adverse to all other claimants, is affirmed. The Commissioner also to-day rendered a decision in the pre emption case of Wm. McGarty against Brown, allowing them to make joint entry of the tract in dispute, situated in San Francisco District, and to enter the remainder of their respective filings as therein described. This is the first direct application made by the General Land Office of the recently enacted law authorizing joint entries by pre emption settlers.

Going for Scalps.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The officers of the Treasury Department, and members of the examining board of that department, left last night for St. Louis and the Southwest to apply Civil Service rules and requisites as to such officers of customs and the independent Treasury service as fall within their operation.

EASTERN STATES.

The Wreck of the Atlantic.

HALIFAX, April 3.—Capt. Williams has returned from the wreck and his search for property. Hopes are entertained that the greater portion of the cargo will be saved. The vessel is still in the same position, with her bow and masts out of water. Statements are made that the crew indulged in plunder of the dead bodies. An instance is related of a wretch who mutilated the hand of a lady to obtain possession of a diamond ring on her finger. The bodies of Mrs. Fisher of Vermont, and Miss Merritt of Chicago, washed ashore yesterday. They lay side by side among 80 others. These bodies will be forwarded to their respective homes. One woman passenger was confined only six hours before the disaster occurred.

HALIFAX, April 4.—A steamer has arrived from the wreck of the Atlantic. The ship is still almost intact, and only a few packages of her cargo have come ashore. The swell continues so heavy that divers cannot work. If the weather is fair, most of her cargo can be saved. One hundred and sixty-four is the exact number of bodies found up to this morning. The work of burying them is now completed. Two bodies announced as recovered, including that of Sam Francisco, were brought to the city to-day, and placed in metallic coffins to await orders from friends. The report that Mrs. Fisher's body had been found is not correct. As soon as divers can get to work, it is hoped the bodies of the remainder of the cabin passengers will be recovered. The bodies of the steerage passengers and of the crew have been buried here.

Authenticity of the People of New York.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Proprietors of a number of hotels in this city announce that they will entertain free of charge, delegates of the Atlantic passing through here to their destination.

Bad Railroad Disasters.

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—While a passenger train of the St. Louis and Southeastern Railroad was standing at French Village, seven miles from East St. Louis, this afternoon, a construction train ran into the rear coach killing Mrs. J. B. Link, John H. White, and terribly scalding the young daughter of Mrs. Watts and more or less injuring two or three others.

RUTLAND, Vt., April 3.—The mail train over the Harlem Railway that left Rutland at 9.05 this morning, met with a serious accident at Hunt's Crossing, caused by the springing of the track. The locomotive, milk car, and passenger coach, were hurled from the track down an embankment 12 feet high. Ten persons are more or less injured.

Valuable Acquisition of Postmasters.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The territory awarded the United States by the San Juan Boundary Arbitration, was brought under purview of our postal laws to-day by the establishment of three postoffices on Lopez, Orcas and Pucmes islands, now a part of Whitcomb county, Washington Territory, with Joseph Gibson and H. F. O'Brient as their respective postmasters. United States postoffices will also shortly be established on San Juan Island.

A $30,000 Vacation.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Georgiana Alden obtained an order of arrest yesterday, that her divorced husband might be prevented from leaving the State until the last judgment of the Court has been settled. Alden subsequently paid over to the woman $30,000 cash, and the order of arrest was vacated.

Valuable Goods Seized.

NEW YORK, April 4.—One hundred thousand dollars' worth of laces have been seized by Custom House officers on the steamship Algeria.

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 5, 1873.

Whose Fault Is It?

It was stated some days since that the bonds of the Oregon and California Railway Company had declined to thirty-five cents on the dollar. This statement the Bulletin, Mr. Holladay's acknowledged mouthpiece, says is true, and attributes the fact to the exposures made by those persons and newspapers in this State who have persisted in the belief that the reckless management of the railway interests of Oregon by that gentleman were calculated in the end to injure the State. That these persons were right in their opinion, few have the hardihood to deny at this time. The truth will be still more apparent as time passes on.

But how have these exposures injuriously affected the market of the railway bonds? It is not pretended that in any material particular the statements of those who have been miscalled the enemies of Mr. Holladay, because they have not endorsed his schemes, or countenanced his practices, have been or are untrue. Then, who is hurt by the truth? If this depreciation has only brought the the bonds down to something like their intrinsic value—if the property on which they are secured is not worth more that thirty-five cents to every dollar of bonds out against it, as we suppose the truth to be—then the wrong is, not that the truth has been made known and the bonds thus depressed to their true value, but that they were ever put upon the market as they were. To go into a foreign land and, in order to secure a loan, make such representations of the value of a given piece of property, whether it be a railway or any other species of property, as to induce bankers who possess no personal knowledge in the premises to advance seventy-five, or eighty, or one hundred dollars for every thirty-five of the actual value of the property, may be honest and honorable in the eyes of some men, and those who expose such conduct to public gaze may be guilty in the same eyes of a great offence, but we confess that we possess no such peculiar acuteness of moral perception as to be able to see anything different from a piece of downright rascality in thus obtaining a loan, or anything other than a meritorious act in the conduct of the person who makes the exposure. This view of the case may be a distorted one, but if so, we can not but think the moral ideas of honest business men are generally distorted.

Now, we do not say that Mr. Holladay has been guilty of any such misconduct as that supposed above, in placing the bonds of the Oregon and California Railway Company. We do not know that such is the case, and we desire to avoid doing any injustice to him. But we do say that since the bonds are not worth over thirty-five cents on the dollar, the presumption is that all that they sold for in excess of that amount was simply so much money obtained wrongfully from those who advanced the money on them. The transaction may not be inconsistent with fair honorable dealing, for there may be some explanation of this decline in the price of bonds which we have not seen; but on the face of the matter, and looking at it from the standpoint of an outsider, it has the appearance of a fraud.

Candidates for the offices of Director and Clerk of this School District are named pretty freely. It seems there is to be no lack of material for officers. The district is in the condition that Mr. Lincoln once found himself in, and which he described very aptly, he saying he "had more pegs than he had holes to put them in."

We have heard the name of Capt. J. C. Ainsworth mentioned in connection with the Directorship, and we are reliably informed that in answer to the request of some prominent citizens, he has signified his willingness to serve the district if chosen; but that he would not, under any circumstances, consent to become a mere party candidate. No better man could be selected, nor any who is better adapted by his known interest in the schools, his business capacity and integrity, and the extent of his interest in the question of taxation, to serve the district well.

C. W. Parrish, Esq., is spoken of as a suitable person to fill the office of Clerk. That he would discharge the duties of the office faithfully and with the requisite ability, no one can doubt. With the other candidates for this position we are less acquainted.

The Bulletin's corps of editors (which, by the way, will soon be corpses), has another fit of sneezing. It raves about a "Sophmore of the bank organ,"—evidently a boomerang shot at the learned pig. We had heard it intimated that their relations were not the pleasantest in the world. But we looked higher than a Sophmore: with the public, the difficulty is in determining which of that twain is Senior, and which Junior—editor. This dig at the "small, ineffectual-looking" machinist who grinds out compound adjectives on the Physical Sciences and Prohibition, is "a most palpable hit." Now, gentlemen, for the sake of decency, let us have no more of these unseemly family quarrels. It is really a matter of no interest to the public as to which of ye twain may be chief editor of the Bu'tin. Ye are par nobiles fratres. Call a caucus of the railroad employes and settle the question before that tribunal; they are the only parties who care a whit. They alone have the right to determine the question.

It is stated that Attorney-General Williams has explained the delay in commencing the Credit Mobilier suit, authorized by the Edmunds' amendment, by saying that parties interested in having the cause tried in certain localities, have brought a great pressure to bear on the Department of Justice. Chicago, Cincinnati, New York, Philadelphia, and Boston are the chief contestants. The Attorney-General prefers the latter, and the suit will accordingly be brought in Boston early in June.

Commissioner Douglass announces that the total receipts of internal revenue during the present fiscal year are $85,000,000. The estimate for the year was $110,000,000, and the Commissioner believes that the receipts will ultimately exceed that estimate.

In Harrisburg, Pa., a movement is on foot for a People's Convention, in the interest of political reform. The People's Convention system is just what is needed throughout the United States.

A Washington dispatch states that the revenue from customs and excise will largely exceed the estimates for the fiscal year, notwithstanding the reduction in taxation. It is probable that the receipts from customs will amount to $206,000,000.

With due gravity it is announced that "Senator Caldwell has forever withdrawn from politics." Hobson's choice?

News from the Modocs.

It appears the Peace Commissioners have been getting along quite amiably with the Modocs of late. From the dispatches published this morning, it seems reasonable to infer that Captain Jack has paroled the Commissioners, so as not to be too much encumbered by them in his future operations, and is now planning for the spring campaign on a more extensive scale than has been contemplated heretofore. At all events, one of his principal braves has stolen a large amount of property and proceeded to the Yainax reservation to induce others of the Modoc tribe to join Jack's band, while the contumacious Chieftain utterly refuses any terms of peace except to be "let alone." We have not the slightest doubt that Jack is watching with the extremest vigilance for any indication of a disposition to violate their parol by the Commissioners, and that he would welcome such an event as an opportunity to treat the Commissioners guilty of such an offence with the utmost rigors of the laws of war.

Meanwhile the military keep coming in closer on the hiding place of the rebellious Chief. It is to be hoped the embarrassments of this Commission business will soon be removed, so that Gen. Canby can get a chance at the savages. The shortest and most sensible way to bring them to terms is to make them feel that any surrender they can make is better than the fate that awaits them if they continue to resist the authority of the Government. Shot and shell are the Commissioners most urgently demanded just now. At the rate this pattering with a band of marauders has been carried on, there is no knowing where the matter is to end. Certainly no course could be adopted that would be better calculated to spread disaffection among the other Indian tribes and encourage them to commit acts similar to those of Jack and his band.

In Washington, says the ever-truthful telegraph, Republican politicians of prominence are encouraging a young foundling known as the "United Workingmen's Association." One would think, in reading the despatches, that the organization was an infant Hercules, since one of its modest propositions is to crush the serpents, Monopoly and Excessive Taxation, in its cradle. Or, its creed, fairly stated, is "legislative resistance to monopolies." It is fair to presume that Hercules was aware of the presence and power of his enemies before their fatal coils closed round him. But with the monopolies it is quite otherwise. The serpent is fostered by its natural enemies, and it usually manages to wind around the victim before he becomes aware of its strength and deadly purpose. It can be said that the birth of a new foe to monopolies inspires some new hope: the more fact that the national Capital is the place of its nativity is encouraging. It has "created considerable activity in political circles." No one would grieve if the politicians who coddle this new creed for political ends should, in the end, meet their death, as conspirators, at its hands.

The New York Times of March 18th publishes some interesting statistics of commerce, compiled from authentic sources. It observes that Great Britain maintains her ancient supremacy, while the United States struggle to maintain their rank as second. The relative commercial strength of the two nations is as follows: Great Britain—Steamships, 2,538, with a tonnage of 2,683,148; United States, 420, with a tonnage of 401,043. Sailing vessels—Great Britain, 19,182, with a tonnage of 5,366,324; United States, 7,092, with a tonnage of 2,272,120. Norway and Italy lead France and Germany in sailing vessels, their relative positions being third and fourth. France is third in steamships while Germany is fourth. The total number of vessels in service at the present time is: Sailing vessels, 56,727, with a measurement of 14,563,339 tons; steamships, 4,333, with a measurement of 3,680,070 tons, or a grand aggregate of 61,060 vessels with a capacity of 18,244,509 tons.

Here is a question on the rights of property not discussed in Wayland. A gentleman of New Hampshire was the happy owner of a lot which the School Trustees of his village desired to purchase for educational purposes. They informed the owner, that upon a day certain, the authorities would meet to discuss the matter of purchase. While they were haggling over the price, the owner concluded to cut down a tree which stood on the lot. Then those stingy Trustees, hearing of his proposed action, brought suit for an injunction to restrain him from destroying the tree, which, they averred, they wanted to adorn the school grounds! The case may be a novel one, but the owner might have evaded all difficulty by suing for a mandamus to compel the Trustees to buy the land or hold their tongues. Any court of competent jurisdiction would have granted that prayer, under the circumstances.

Those Glasgow stockholders of the Emma Mine, Utah, are altogether too inquisitive. They hold an indignation meeting the other day, and appointed a committee of five to investigate the affairs of the company, and to represent them at the coming annual meeting in London. Not content with such high-handed proceeding, they actually dared to utter the following scandalous opinions on the purity of American stock operators: "They complain bitterly that they were spending $25,000 a year on the Directors in order to keep them in ignorance. They complained, too, that there were so many fancy Directors that it was proposed that the salaries should be reduced one half of one per cent. upon the profits be paid. There seemed to be a great impression that the American Directors were paddling their own canoes."

Here's another insurance company in a muddle. Captain Colcoresses of Litchfield, Ct., having tired of the cold caresses of the world, resolved to end his mundane career with powder and ball. Which he did. At his death, the New York Life Insurance Co., declined to pay three $10,000 policies on his life (of course!) on the ground that he had committed suicide. An inspection of one of the policies revealed the somewhat remarkable provision in one of them, permitting the holder to slaughter himself at his own sweet will. And now the President of that company has offered a reward for the scalp of the agent who got up that $10,000 policy.

The prolonged strike among the colliers of South Wales ended on the 28th day of March. Only a portion of the workmen have yielded, but the iron-workers having consented to the masters' terms, the combination has broken down; and now those who held out, are unable to secure employment. A London dispatch estimates the cost of this unfortunate movement, to the strikers and their supporting comrades, at $750,000, and "against this, they have, as offset, nothing." Thus ends the most extensive strike among the laboring classes, of which the world has record.

The Suwanee Letters—Another Statement about the Wright.

The Olympia Courier, it seems to us, is about as far out of the way in the manner in which it treats the intemperate and unreasonable comments of the British Colonist on the "Suwanee" letters, as the Colonist was in making the comments. The Colonist denounced the Courier for publishing the horrible fabrications of "Suwanee" in regard to the fate of the passengers of the George S. Wright (the same that were copied into the daily papers of this city), for no other reason than that the statements of "Suwanee" reflected on the British authorities. It is certainly a new rule of journalism, a rule that has not yet obtained very general recognition, that a general newspaper like the Courier is to refrain from the publication of a statement so well authenticated, and of such respectable authorship as the Courier claimed the "Suwanee" letters to have been, and that, too, concerning a subject so involved in mystery as the fate of the Wright's passengers, simply because it might be displeasing to some neighbor. We have not the slightest doubt now that the "Suwanee" letters were the fabrications of some evil-disposed person who was willing to pen so cowardly a lie, for the purpose of gratifying a malice against the officers and others upon whom his letters cast aspersions. But we cannot subscribe to the doctrine that the Courier was bound to exercise greater diligence to know the truth of the matter before its publication than it claimed to have exercised. To make a newspaper responsible for the correctness of the facts stated by all its correspondents, or even for the opinions they may express, would be to deprive it of half its ordinary resources of information, and wholly destroy its value as a medium of popular discussion.

But when the Courier, in replying to the Colonist, says that the statements of the "Suwanee" letters are corroborated by McGrath's letter in the Colonist, we think it overshoots the mark quite as greatly as the Colonist did in its criticism of the Courier. The worst features of the "Suwanee" canard are entirely unsupported by the Colonist's correspondent. He is the McGrath letter:

ALERT BAY, March 22, 1873.

EDITOR BRITISH COLONIST:—The Aurkeno Indians were the first to the wreck of the G. S. Wright, about the day it happened. They were on their way down to the Fanaughtas to a feast. They got valuable furs by the bale. One Indian is said to have picked up 100 sea-otter skins. The Indians are mum about anyone getting ashore. Last week I heard that there were two white men got ashore at the place where the skins were. If so, it will take a long time to learn their fate. It was a great oversight to take those Indians from Fort Rupert and let them ashore at Smith's Inlet. The Indians are laughing how they fooled the man-of-war again. It is a pity the Awikenos were not visited. It is too late now. The Gussie Telfair made a mistake in not calling at the different places where the G. S. Wright was in the habit of stopping; for instance, at Alert Bay, where she could have got the first news. This is a matter, with many others in this district, which will demand the immediate attention of the Indian Department; but they must look sharp that they are not fooled also.

JAMES F. McGRATH.

Death to the Communist.

PARIS, March 29.—Felix Payatt, the French politician, writer, lawyer and ex-Communist, has been sentenced to death by a Government Commission.

France, it would seem, is not yet done with the Commune. Its horrible scenes of murder and bloodshed are to be remembered, until the Vendemoire of the Corsican and the Thermidor of Capet fade from the memories of Frenchmen. Since the fall of Rochefort and his cabal, the punishment of Communists has been going steadily on. There is, herein, a marked contrast between the French mode of dealing with conquered insurrectionists, and the plan adopted by the United States for the pacification of our rebellious States. The severest penalties of a rigorous criminal code have been awarded to the zealots of the Commune; whereas, in our land, a justice equally stern, perhaps, has been tempered by rare magnanimity. And this is not because the sentiment of a common brotherhood is wanting in the French character. On the contrary, the belief that all Frenchmen are held together by a bond quite as strong as that of consanguinity, is one of its peculiar traits. The Commune was the exuberant outgoing of this belief;—an ill-adjusted fraternity. It is thus with all the Latin races. But, beyond a certain point, this lofty sentiment becomes a mere creed,—the image of an idea. In "the piping times of peace" the French national heart is all aglow with brotherly love. War comes; with it, fraternal hate and discord. And so, forever, Nemesis sits brooding over the memories of revolution, insurrection and massacre with which that lovely land is most accursed. And so, too, in fever-spasms of magnanimity (in one of which was Rochefort spared) the work of avenging the Column Vendome goes on!

A few days since, we stated that Governor Osborne, of Kansas, was in Washington anxiously watching the dying kicks of Senator Caldwell, from whose feet the Senatorial shoes were about to fall. It has been said, also, that the Governor had some high hopes of the succession. But now we read his declaration "that in no event will he resign his gubernatorial office under any agreement with the Lieutenant-Governor to appoint him to the Senate." Really, this Lieutenant-Governor is provokingly particular about the number of zeros! But one can not help admiring this oasis of Osborne's heroic resignation to the popular will, amid that desert of corruption which is strewn with the bleaching bones of Pomeroy, Caldwell, York, and (possibly) Ingalls! It is this verdant, antique virtue which burdens the wires with the assertion that the Governor "does not desire political elevation, except through an honest choice by the people." Commendable self-denial, that!

This time, it is a local reporter to the New York press, one Robert Pontifex Mallory, heir to $100,000 worth of property near Cheltenham, England, which is held in trust. "He died in Jersey City, in utter want." Probably he wanted the $100,000. Almost any local reporter would be willing to die, if it could be proven that he was heir to that amount of money. All parties by the name of Mallory will please open a correspondence, and establish their relationship to the defunct High Priest—Pontifex.

At a meeting of the Spanish Cabinet Council, on the 28th of March, Tetuan, Minister of Finance, stated that the finances of the country were in a deplorable condition. He warned his colleagues that the Republic could not remain master of the situation unless radical changes were made in the fiscal administration. Certainly, the Republic will be in sad plight if she be found wanting in funds in her struggle for life with Don Carlos.

A woman named Fulton, in Knox county, came to her death, a few days ago, by eating too many walnuts.

A New York dispatch of March 29th says that of the fifty-eight companies now running postal cars, only eight have entered into the agreement to withdraw the cars unless their demand for increased compensation is acceded to. The Erie road has declined to go into the arrangement, and it is said that the movement is greatly weakened by its refusal. The Hudson River and New York Central is the strongest corporation among the strikers, but its influence is materially impaired by the action of the Erie. The Postmaster General regards the claims of the strikers with favor. He seems to think the railroads have been imposed on. At least, we infer that, from the promise he has made to them: that he will recommend to the Forty-third Congress a certain specific increase, dating back to the present time. Doubtless the Essex statesman is employing his leisure hours in drawing up another retroactive bill. But there is one queer passage in the Washington dispatch from which we gain our information. It is this:

> The Postal Department, besides showing itself powerless to grant a greater increase than the seventy-five per cent. provided by the legislation of the last Congress, claims that the Department has always manifested a willingness to aid the companies in securing increased pay, but that the railroad companies themselves never assisted the movement properly.

The italics are ours.

A Paris dispatch of March 29th, contains the annexed brief summary of the debate over Prince Napoleon's petition, praying for a rescission of the decree, under the operation of which he was once expelled, and is now an exile from France:

> In the Assembly to-day there was an excited debate over Prince Napoleon's petition praying for the restoration of his rights as a citizen, and remonstrating against his illegal expulsion from France. Minister Dufaure, on the part of the Government, refused to accept the Special Committee's report on the subject, which was conservative in its character and by implication censured the Government. He argued that the Bonaparte Princes had rejected the decree which decreed their dynasty; therefore it was impossible to treat them as mere citizens. He spoke in terms of scathing contempt of the coup d'etat on which the power of the late Emperor was founded.
> Depayre, in behalf of the Committee, repudiated any intention of censuring the Government, and defended the report.
>
> Dufaure, to remove all doubt as to the opinion of the Chamber, then submitted a bill for exiling the Bonaparte family, and moved a simple order of the day, which, after prolonged excitement, was adopted by a vote of 347 to 291.

A Baltimore dispatch of March 29th says:

> The southern bound passenger train on the Northern Central Railroad, due here at nine this morning, arrived an hour behind time, owing to a detention by a serious collision, which occurred between eight and nine o'clock last night at Liverpool Station, about twenty-eight miles above Harrisburg, where the road makes a sharp curve among mountains. Two freight trains met at this point on the same track, when a fearful collision took place. Both engines were shattered, and the cars came crushing into one another in a general wreck. The fires in the furnaces of the engines were quickly communicated to the ruins, and very soon some twenty cars with their contents, including spirits and other combustible merchandise, were wrapped in flames and consumed. A fireman belonging to Duncannon, Pennsylvania, and another man unknown, were burned to death.

A New York dispatch of March 29th says:

> At a meeting of the Presidents of the various trunk railroads interested in the postal car controversy, held this afternoon, it was decided to continue running postal cars pending action of the Special Committee on the part of the Senate to report upon the relations of the Postoffice Department with the railroads, and a letter to that effect was sent to the Postmaster General on behalf of the various roads. Agent Bangs, of the Postoffice Department, was present, and urged that the appointment of this committee was evidence that Congress was disposed to deal equitably with the companies.

The paragraph annexed affords some information concerning the present dangerous illness of Representative Brooks:

> WASHINGTON, March 29.—Hon. James Brooks is lying very ill here from malarial fever and chronic dysentery, which are regarded serious, though not necessarily fatal. Brooks was affected by malaria when in China, eighteen months ago, and his malady was greatly aggravated by exposure on the trip through the East Indies and the Red Sea. He came home an invalid, and immediately went to Washington without sufficient precaution to rid himself of the disease.

Passengers, by purchasing THROUGH TICKETS save money and trouble, and secure the best conveyances, by the only line by which close connections can be relied on. The small reduction made by so called opposition stage lines cannot benefit THROUGH PASSENGERS, as the local fare over the N. P. R. R. and other lines exceed the reduction made by the opposition.

Through tickets can be obtained in Portland at O. S. N. Co's office; Olympia, at COGGANS' STAGE office, and on board the P. S. S. N. Co's steamers.

OUR AGENTS on trains will take charge of baggage and freight for stages, in well lined Stoaline Buggies, Carriages and other private conveyances can be secured by telegraphing to the Agent at the Stage Office at Olympia. N. PIERCE, Agent.

CITY.

DISCOVERY OF MINERALS.—A few weeks ago a gentleman who has had considerable experience as a miner, while out prospecting near the north fork of the Coquille river, discovered what he pronounced to be rich traces of silver and gold. Specimens were collected and forwarded to San Francisco for assay. On being subjected to the test, these specimens were found to contain a very large per centage of the two metals—about $200 per ton. Representations having been made to certain capitalists of San Francisco by the person who made the discovery, that the ore abounded in great abundance in that section of the Territory, a Mr. Merryman was sent up at once in the interest of those men, to examine more fully the character of the country and the quantities of the metal. Mr Merryman arrived here on the last steamer en route for Idaho. He purchased of Mr Fisk an outfit with which to make accurate assays, and left for his destination yesterday morning. If Mr Merryman finds things as they have been represented, several San Francisco capitalists who have become interested, go there to erect as soon as practicable, large smelting works and operate these mines. Nu doubts appear to exist as to the richness of the ore, the only question being is there a sufficient quantity of the metal to warrant the erection of such expensive works. The scene of these discoveries is located nearly on a direct line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and the inducements are, if the present expectations are realized, and smelting works constructed, the ore after being put in a condition to send to the mint, will be allowed to remain until the completion of the proposed line of railway. Everything will rest—as regards future operations—on the report of Mr. Merryman, and weeks will probably elapse before the result of his examination is known.

TWO CABLES.—We learn that the Western Union Telegraph Company have concluded not to lay the old cable which was broken some time ago below Stark street, and since spliced, across the river at Milwaukie. The bed of the river at that point is composed entirely of rocks over which the current sweeps strong. The cable which was laid there some time since, did not remain but a few months, having been severed by the force of the current. All ideas of a cable at that point have been abandoned. The old spliced cable will be stretched in a few months just below Stark street. A new cable was laid about a month ago at that point, but the old one will be used as an extra or reserved cable in the event that the new one should be severed, or the connection interrupted.

A REFORM SCHOOL.—The incorporators of the Reform School are to hold an adjourned meeting to day at Ladd & Tilton's Bank, at 3 o'clock P. M. The Board, as created by the Legislature, are W S Ladd, A C Gibbs, James Steel, B B. Taylor, D Goldsmith, Henry Failing, J C Ainsworth, H. W Corbett, W Lair Hill, Wm H Watkins, M. P Deady, Jacob Meyer, Charles Hodge, A Hurgren, J C Moussdorffer, G H Flanders, H H. Northrup, Theo Wygant, Wm Wadhams, J. P O Lownsdale, Edwin Russell, J K Gill, Thomas Frazer, and D Macleay.

It is to be hoped that there will be a prompt and full attendance at the meeting, and that the institution, so much needed, may be launched under favorable circumstances.

PASSENGER LIST.—The steamer Ajax sailed last evening for San Francisco, having on board the following persons: Geo W Weidler, T J Gallagher and wife, M H Scott, L J Davis, Mrs G O Holmes, S F Blythe, L Samuel and wife, A W Asbury, Capt Hornsley, Julius Enfort and wife, F S Whittier, H H Noyes, J Peters, wife and three infants; J R Morse, Chas Ream, wife and child, P A Stokes, Caleb Reed, Capt S W Persival, W Church jr, F X Parket and son, A Meier, Mrs Allen McGough, Louis Prager, Mrs J E Richardson and two infants, F D Sobarff, P H Clark, R Love, W W Gollin, Miss Caroline Stolz, William Wagner, Rev D Jones, wife and two children, D Malone, W T Daggett, W F & Co's messenger and 40 in the steerage.

WAGON BROKEN.—On Thursday evening a horse attached to a butcher cart and driven by Mr Geo. Criswell, ran off. There was seated in the cart at the time a Mr. Moore. The horse became unmanageable, and both the men could not restrain the animal with their united strength. Finding themselves in peril, both the men attempted to jump out. Before this could be done, the horse ran against the corner of the sidewalk, precipitating Criswell and Moore headlong to the ground. Moore escaped with some severe bruises, and one of Criswell's wrists was broken. He was removed to a house and the limb set. At last accounts he was doing well.

SPECIAL MEETING.—Last Monday evening, in the absence of a quorum, there was no meeting of the Board of Trustees of East Portland. However, by common consent among the members, a special meeting was held on Tuesday evening. Correct Monday evening the annual school meeting will be held in East Portland, and there will be no meeting of the Board.

ACROSS THE CHANNEL.—The telegraphic communication between the two points of land on Fidalgo and San Juan islands, which some weeks ago was severed in consequence of the breakage of the cable, has been restored. A new cable has been laid, and carrying messages between the two points is no longer necessary.

TOKEN will be services both morning and evening in the Unitarian Church to morrow. The communion service of the month is deferred till next Sunday, 4 P. M. (Easter). The subject to-morrow is suggested by the late marine disaster.

SENT UP.—A Chinaman was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning, charged with the larceny of a stove. The Court being satisfied of the guilt of the defendant, sentenced the party to the county jail for twenty days.

COMPLETED.—Deputy County Clerk A E Borthwick has just completed the road tax roll for Road District No. 2, which will be delivered to the Supervisor in a few days. The roll contains about 1 000 names, with the amount of road tax due set opposite each person's name.

IN SAN FRANCISCO.—Mr. R. Jacobs, President of the Oregon City Woolen Mill Company, is now in San Francisco, having arrived from the East a few days ago. He will depart for this city on the next steamer. The machinery for the new mills can be expected in a few weeks.

THE LOWER RIVER.—The steamer Marie Hill will not ply on the waters of the upper Willamette as originally intended. Hereafter she will run between Portland, the Cowlitz and the harbor on the Lower Columbia.

BOARD OF DELEGATES.—A regular meeting of the Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department, will be held this evening at the Police Court rooms at the usual hour.

SPECIAL CHURCH NOTICES

At the First Congregational Church corner of Second and Jefferson streets, the topic presented in the morning by J. D Eaton will be "The Physical Basis of the Spiritual Life." Seats free to all.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Morris will hold his annual visitation of St. Stephen's Chapel, Madison street, near Fourth, to morrow, Palm Sunday, on which occasion he will preach in the morning, and administer the Holy Rite of Confirmation during the afternoon service, beginning at 3 30 P. M. Seats free.

Rev. Addison Jones, of Salem, will preach at the Baptist Church to morrow morning and evening. Monthly communion at 3 P. M. One week from to-morrow a number of persons who have recently united with this church will receive the formal token in public recognition of membership during the morning service.

PERSONAL

Judge Rice, Vice President of the North Pacific Railroad, is likely to be a passenger for Portland on the steamer which sails for this port to day.

Rev. Daniel Jones, took his departure last evening on the steamer Ajax en route for his new field of ministerial labors. He is accompanied by his family.

A. Ehman builds neat and substantial cottage houses, hard finished, for $650. Prices for story and a half and two story houses reasonable in proportion. Plans of houses on hand. Inquire at 125 First street, opposite postoffice.

Wending up at this end, accounts for the quick trips of the Hayward to the Cascades and back.

The little sloop Owl was out sailing yesterday, notwithstanding the breeze was at the time pretty stiff.

The vacant space around Trinity Church is being sodded, which will add much to its attractiveness.

An insane woman was reported yesterday to Judge Hamilton, but as yet no examination has been made.

A number of men are digging a ditch on the southern side of one of the plazas in front of the Court House.

Stark street—south side—between Front and First, is filthy beyond description, and no effort is being made to clean it up.

Fourth street, between B and G, presents a lively appearance between six and seven o'clock in the morning and evening.

A heavily loaded truck mired down at the corner of L and Front streets yesterday, and was not extricated until most of the load was removed.

A picture of a four pound pear, raised on Walling's farm, adorns the office of Love's Hotel. That pear was sent to San Francisco years ago.

Not satisfied with having presented Trinity Church with a superb bell—the largest one by far in the State—Hon Benj Stark sent a check a few days since on Ladd & Tilton's bank, which paid the freight from the foundry where the bell was cast to the Church door.

AMUSEMENTS

Charles Reade's dramatized version of Tennyson's beautiful poem of "Dora" attracted a good audience last evening at Ore Fino Theater, on the re opening of this place of amusement. At the conclusion of this drama, Mr Piercy recited "Sheridan's Ride," and Crosbie the very laughable parody of "Schneider's Ride." The evening's entertainment closed with the ludicrous farce of "Rascal Pat." A matinee will be given at 2 o'clock this afternoon, at which "Dora" and "Rascal Pat" will be offered. The programme this evening will consist of "Wine and the Wheel wind," and "Irish Emigrant."

McGipley's Variety Troupe returned to this city last evening by the Rescue, after a tour of two and a half years in British Columbia. During this time, Mr McGinley built a theater in Peace River, and played and mined there over a year. Fortune has not favored the troupe, however, and they have now returned and will play in this city and State. Mr McGinley is well known as a manager in this country having first played at the old Willamette Theater about 1860 and several times since with his troupe, consisting of his family of sons and daughters. As soon as arrangements can be made, he will give a series of entertainments at Ore Fino Theater.

BUSINESS NOTICES

Meussdorffer, the hatter, has arranged his new stock, and now announces what he has in store. We refer the public to his ad.

The Columbia River Mail Line, under the superintendency of Geo Coggan, is becoming quite popular. Note the new announcement.

A. B. Richardson will sell at auction next Tuesday, on the premises, corner of East Park and G streets, some elegant household furniture.

THE COURTS.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT—DEADY, J.

FRIDAY, April 5th, 1873.

U S. vs W. D Page—case continued to next Thursday, on motion of defendant.

Adjourned to Tuesday next.

GRAVE AND GAY.

An exchange having said "The first robin has been seen, but one robin doesn't make a spring," the Auburn Bulletin retorts, "Try him with a hog and see."

Nine jurymen in a San Francisco court didn't go to sleep during an important trial held in that city recently, and consequently disagreed from the other three who did.

Recipe for mailing a row—Walk along the pavement of a crowded thoroughfare with a ladder on your shoulder and turn round every two minutes to see if anybody is minding their own affairs.

Mr Charles Thompson recently ran his head against a young lady during a collision. "Oh! excuse me dear," he cried. "Did it hurt, sir?" "No, sir," she replied, "it is to soft to hurt anything."

A shrewd old gentleman once said to his daughter, "Be sure, my dear, you never marry a poor man, but remember that the poor man in the world is one that has money and nothing else."

Rev Henry Morgan told his audience at the Cooper Institute last night "Why Men Don't Marry." That is guessing the wrong conundrum. It would puzzle him to tell why some women do marry the men they take.—Daily Graphic.

The white marble statue of Queen Victoria, weighing seven tons, has arrived at Windsor Castle, and is to be placed in the vestibule of the State Department. The Queen is represented sitting on a chair, with a dog lying by her side.

An Ohio man attached a medal to an eagle's neck and with much ceremony set it at liberty on Washington's birthday. Two days later the proud bird made a descent on a farmer's sheep pen and its brief career was ended by a charge of buckshot.

A Chinaman, being examined as to his competency to testify in court, was asked what would be his punishment if he should swear to lies. "I shall never return to China, but always remain in New York," was the reply. He was at once sworn.

A friend of M. Thiers, calling upon him, alluded in the course of conversation to the events of Spain, saying "Well, Monsieur le President, the Pyrenees exist no longer!" M Thiers replied sharply: "Yes they do! and if they did not we would have to make them."

The Swiss Times tells this story of Bishop Macrorie. He—the bishop—was sitting next a Yankee navy captain, who said to him, "You have in your province two rival bishops, C—and another fellow, which of them do you incline to?" I am the other fellow," said M—.

A Vermont farmer went to an orphan asylum for a boy that was smart, active, brave, tractable, prompt, industrious, clean, pious, intelligent, good-looking, reserved and modest. The superintendent wrote back that unfortunately they had only human boys in that institution.

Punch finds fun in the coal famine. Wife—"O, Charles, how kind of the Brownes!" (reads)—"Mrs Brown presents her compliments to Mr. and Mrs Jones and hopes they will give her the pleasure of their company at a fire party on Monday, March 3—fires lighted at 6 30."

A clergyman who left a notice in his pulpit to be read by the preacher who exchanged with him, neglected to denote carefully a private postscript, and the congregation were astonished to hear the stranger wind up by saying "You will please come to dine with me at the parsonage."

A shark eleven feet in length was recently presented to the Dundee Museum. On being opened for the purpose of stuffing, it was found to contain the remains of a variety of fish, a woman's bonnet, and a soda-water bottle, in which was a note conveying some interesting intelligence in a lady's handwriting.

How a great business can decay is exemplified in the case of Nantucket. Thirty years ago the island sent nearly a hundred whalers—fine, large ships—into the Pacific ocean. Now the R. L Barstow—the last vessel in the whaling business bearing the name of Nantucket on her stern—has been sold at Callao.

Jedediah Burchard, once preaching a revival sermon, was interrupted by the entrance of Aaron Burr. "Here comes one," says the revivalist, "against whom even I will testify in the day of judgment." "Yes, sir," said Burr, "in fifty years of criminal practice I have always found the greatest rascal turn State's evidence."

A sportsman was seated with his servant on a bank consoling himself under the fatigue and disappointment of unsuccessful pursuit. "Well, Pat," said he, "this is expensive work. I've been calculating that every one of those birds has cost me above fifty pounds." "Faith your honor," said Pat, throwing a dash of humor into the sympathizing simplicity of his reply, "I'm sorry for that, but it's lucky there's no more of them."

The following conversation is said to have taken place at 3 A M one day during the carnival week, between a certain New Orleans gentleman and his spouse. Cruel husband—"Dearest you—" Indignant wife—"Don't tell me any more lies! Didn't you say last night that you were only going to a quiet little party—dominoes and that sort of thing." Cruel husband—"But so, that's what I said, exactly. Dominoes, dominoes, you know! Always have dominoes at a masked ball."

A gentleman living at Cannes, the Viscount B——, being anxious respecting the safety of one of his friends living in Paris, after reading the account in the newspapers of the recent terrible storm, sent him the following despatch: "We hope you have not had a chimney pot on the top of your head." The following day the telegram was returned to the viscount from the telegraph office with the following remarks: "The accompanying telegram, not having any sense, must, in accordance with Article 1, be looked at in the light of a secret despatch, the transmission of which is prohibited."

MATTERS OF FASHION

They have revived the high pointed heel in Paris just as it was going entirely out of fashion here.

It is one of the latest fashions for brides maids at church weddings to wear bonnets, corresponding in color to their toilettes.

Long pendant ear rings have finally gone out of fashion. Now the ladies are wearing studs on the lobe of the ear, or small discs of gold, about the size of a cherry.

Some of the spring bonnets are of the most curious description and style. They form almost a point over the forehead, and are a fine combination of lace, feathers, flowers, jet and hair pins.

Organists nowadays who perform at fashionable church weddings are furnished beforehand with a list of the music which the happy couple desire to have "discoursed" on the eventful occasion.

India shawls are all the rage—at least among the fortunate few who can afford them. The more green there is in an India, and the lighter it is, any those who profess to know, the more valuable is the article.

Fashionable modistes are sending out dainty cards of invitation for their annual exposition of spring bonnets and costumes. They are becoming "awfully swell," these modistes, and require the cards of admission to be presented at the door as at the opera or the ater.

The Albany Journal gets off the following personal: "Cass Humphrey, who got his maiden boost in life as a "comp" in this office, is up from Salem rejuvinating, and seeing his greenness."

There is on exhibition at the Seattle Intelligencer office an egg, measuring 7¼ inches lengthwise, by 6¼ round. It was laid by a white Brahma hen, less than seven months old.

If you want the woven wire bed, parlor and bedroom suits, the best spring and pure hair mattresses, go to Burgren & Shindler.

Remember the Noon Day Prayer Meetings at the rooms of the Y M C A, corner of Stark and First street, from 12½ to 1 o'clock.

Teeth like orient pearls set in cushions of rose;
A breath like the perfume the violet bestows.
Those are the charms to win hearts whom all their charms fade
But they can't be preserved without SOZODONT'S aid.

Wake Up the System
When the physical energies droop and the mind becomes lethargic it may be taken for granted that the digestion is impaired and the liver derelict in its duty. Upon the condition of these much and liver depend the condition of the blood, and upon the quality of that fluid depends the vigor of the body and the capacity for brain labor. It is therefore of the utmost importance to men engaged in active pursuits who are subject to attacks of bodily weakness and mental stupor or indifference, to know from what source they can obtain immediate and permanent relief. The tonic and anti bilious stimulating elements combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters peculiarly adapt that genial preparation to cases of this kind. The rapidity with which it renews the dormant powers of the muscular and nervous system is marvelous. Acting first upon the digestive organs and through them upon the fluids of the body, the nerves and the brain, it regenerates, refreshes and regulates not only the corporal powers, but the mind itself. As debility and its usual concomitant, mental torpor or depression, are often caused, and where they already exist are always aggravated by the damp and variable weather prevalent in the spring months, persons of feeble stamina and weak nerves should go through a course of this agreeable stimulant at this season of the year, and indeed would derive great advantage from taking it at least once a day the whole year.

PLANTATION BITTERS!
S. T.—1860—X.
The wonderful vegetable restorative is the sheet-anchor of the feeble and debilitated. As a tonic and cordial for the aged and languid it has no equal among stomachics. As a remedy for the nervous weakness to which women are especially subject, it is superseding every other stimulant. In all climates, tropical, temperate or frigid, it acts as a specific in every species of disorder which undermines the bodily strength and breaks down the animal spirits.

Implora Pace

BY BAYARD TAYLOR

The clouds that stoop from yonder sky
Discharge their burdens and are free
The streams that take them hasten by,
To find relief in lake and sea

The wildest wind in valleys afar
Sleeps, pillowed on its rifled wings
And song through many a stormy bar,
Beats into silence on the strings

And I, no more resumes his joy and unrest,
And first ambition as a flight is over
And doubt is cradled on the breast
Of perfect faith and speaks no more

Our dreams and passions rouse no lark
And holy patience learns her part;
Yet some keen pursuing care
Forbids content to brain and heart.

The gift nurses had beyond the hand,
The fault is all of beauty won
The mildew of the harvest land
That sighs to ripen the risen sun

And still one cheaper service claims
The will that leaps to lighter call
Some cloud is cast on splendid aims,
No power achieved soon comes to thrall

To spoil each heck ning victory,
A thousand pliant hands are thrust
And I and evil's fight at hand were
Our chief foe with lower dust.

Above all we be silent peaceful air
At last save purpose their free
Till rise, strong hearts live
The day calling the plain that is free

Let higher goal and harder way
To test our every the comforts
Then if rill sea we pray
But freedom for our task divine

A ROMANCE OF THE DESERT

BY H. A. CLARKE

Written for the New York Times

Joe was panning out the cleanup of our last week's run for it was Saturday night of a long summer day—an it is always "night when a miner's day's work is done though the sun still hung above the Wasatch we were unversally at work Bob was putting away the tools and cutting wood from a fallen pine that lay before the cabin door, across which we approached the house by means of steps notched in the sides I was preparing supper and Joe, as I have said, was panning out the gold, though an occasional grow! showed that the result was not to his satisfaction The gleams of the yellow metal would have satisfied a novice, but they told an unsatisfactory story to him, and he exclaimed 'I say Bill, what's the use of follern this any longer? The water is so nearly mud that all the fine gold swims off in it, and we only get the coarse out of it Let's lay the diggins over until next spring, and strike out for something else!"

About that time Bob came in with his wood, took up the pan and scrutinized the yield with a critical eye

"Half the run's gone down stream,' said he. Bob was oracular.

To which I replied, "Joe says it's a losing game to keep on with work, and wants us to go prospecting"

Supper was over, the week's trading had been done at the store a mile away, the summer evening had cooled off with delightful freshness, and we sat on the fallen tree which fenced in the foreground of our dwelling, and smoked our pipes in tranquil peace as we watched the passers by on the trail that traversed the ravine, and enjoyed the solace of the evening air, always so delightful when summer visited the mountains

Not often had our fortunes been so propitious We had diggings scarcely opened that promised us well, and we were easy on the score of next year's work. Our buckskin pouches were well filled and cached safely away—Bob knew where—and we were prepared to stay at home or travel, as we pleased It is not characteristic of the miner to stay and watch where he cannot work, and in each of our minds was revolving the question as to where we should make a summer tour.

Bob was the eldest of the three At least thirty-three years had summered on his brown beard, bronzed his plain features, and shone out of a pair of as faithful blue eyes as ever served as light-houses for the soul within Bob was our oracle; Joe and I often wondered why he stuck to us through such vicissitudes, but we never had a single wonder why we staid by him Bob was not obtrusive, his leadership was an unconscious one, and his suggestions were always waited for.

Just as the stars came into sight, glimmering among the tree tops, he knocked the ashes from his pipe and answered the remark I had made before supper.

"I say, Bill, where does Joe want to go?"

Joe became eloquent over the rumors that had reached the Boise Basin from the Mountains of Owyhee. A returned prospector had told him of the new diggings across Snake river, where the gold was abundant, though strongly alloyed with silver, and wore quartz veins were giving a promise that riches equal to the treasure of the famous Comstock lode had cropped out in the mountains of Southeastern Idaho.

Bob looked askant the log at me, I nodded assent by moonlight, and it was then decided that our course lay westward for Owyhee Sunday our clothes were put in order—in other words, our washing was hung out on the limbs of the fallen pine On Monday Joe went for the horses, while Bob and I looked after things about camp Tuesday saw our tools properly housed, and our sluice boxes piled away where they would not be easily warped in the sun. Notices were posted that our claims were "laid over," and the padlocked door of our humble cabin bore the significant motto in letters of charcoal.

GOME PROSPECTING.

We three were partners in luck or want of it, as chance favored us. Men form merely mercenary combinations for trade, and even religion is prosecuted on shares, but as natural and as truly as matches are made in heaven are "partners" chosen in the mines. Friendships grow and bud and blossom under the blows of the pick and shovel, watered by a a "full sluice head," such as would equal the story of "Damon and Pythias," if as well told, and could throw into the shade the dull love-making of nine-tenths of Christendom.

I remember them now—my partners—as if it were but yesterday, that we made that last clean-up, for no other ever succeeded it to give us a dividend, but it is eight years ago that we "laid over" our claims in Elk Horn Gulch, and went prospecting to Owyhee

We had drifted on many a wave, stranded on many a shore, and at times had made "strikes" that lifted us upon the shoulders of fortunes and left us 'flush' We went to "Californy" years before Met each other by chance, and by some cohesive property that is incomprehensible except to those who "know how it is themselves," we formed a partnership that has never ended, though its tenure has become uncertain because Bob and Joe have gone upon a prospecting expedition whence they can never return, but where, in time, they will explain the "indications" to me when I join them, as I shall when I have worked out my claim here below

The golden placers west of the Sierras grew miserly, and we tried quartz The excitement of the chase led us—we never thought it possible to separate—over the great Sierras into Nevada, and eastward still and northward to Idaho, where we participated in the varying favors fortune showers upon her followers—as uncertainly bestowed as the successes that attend the followers of roulette or faro.

We crossed deserts and mountains, alternately traversed sage brush, plain, and volcanic ranges, forded rivers and skirted the inland seas that gleam in the northern deserts, and were now upon the waters of Snake river, the great southern affluent of the Columbia. North of Snake river, in the regions of middle Idaho, we had found the famous mines of Boise Basin We arrived a little too late to reap the first fruits of the wonderful harvest of gold, the truth of which seems akin to fable, but early enough to make a fair location After a few satisfactory "clean ups," the dry season came on, and the mountain torrents dwindled to mere turbid flows, that had been used over and over before it reached our sluices and we could not save with its use the greater bulk of the finer gold

Once, in California, I wandered up a stream that poured down from the Sierras along which were being reaped such golden harvests as I longed for I found myself toward night near Bob's camp, borrowed a brand of him to light my fire, and prepared my supper I sat by Bob and smoked, but we had little talk He invited me to sleep in his cabin we breakfasted together, and when he went to work I took a pick and joined him We talked more over the sluices than by the cabin fire At noon, when I would have moved on, he took his pipe from his mouth and said

'Couldn't you stay?' and I stayed I read the blue eyes before I accepted the invitation

There were no articles of incorporation, no agreement of partnership, not even did one ask the other a name I stayed on position, and unquestioning and when the week's work was cleaned up Bob poured the proceeds into a new purse and said

'You see partner we'll begin a new lot, and from that time Job always dealt me as good a hand as he held himself

One Saturday night Bob came back from the store down the gulch bringing with him an auburn haired freckled faced lad who wanted work His hazel eyes and curly yellow hair must have reminded Bob of something or somebody for he said to him 'Come along, youngster and I'll give you a job

Joe lifted the blue eyes and he came He was often then had been a month of the frontier line in Tennessee and soon Bob announced him as jolly a little cuss as ever was

A friendship and confidence sprang up between those two such as I never saw equalled, except where man and woman love each other truly Bob petted the boy until he grew a man and then he loved him better than a brother Six years had passed, and Joe became a partner It happened thus One Sunday Bob said to me Bill, there'll be three on us after this It never occurred to him that I could object no more could I

It was a two days drive from Elk Horn Gulch to Boise city the inland emporium of the deserts and wastes There the plains began, and sage brush is the rule, except where the Boise river waters a strip of meadow where the eye is gladdened by sight of houses, orchards, and fields crossing this river, we struck across the desert for Owyhee, to cross the Snake river midway of the journey

Mountain travel has its advantages but the day's ride in July over those dusty plains was a monotony unseasoned except by clouds of alkali dust from the narrow trail and not a drop of water for miles and miles, until you are almost famished

There used to be a spring somewhere in this desert, not exactly wholesome, but better than no water, and at this place we intended to camp at night, turn our horses out on a rye grass sag near by, and start again at early day

There had been a stone hut put up there, roofed over with canvas, where a couple of sailors kept hotel with a fire made between stones, while the smoke found its way out at it could through a hole in the canvas roof, Greese wood and sage brush answered as fuel, and a pot full of bacon and beans was the staple fare, with a cup of coffee 'straight' to wash it down

But instead of this stone hut we rode up to a comfortable adobe house, planted out upon the open desert An enterprising Yankee family from way down East, had come out on this desert, built this dwelling and opened public house It consisted of father, mother and a daughter of about eighteen It seemed a miracle to find in this parched up wilderness the externals of comfort, and to realize that young trees from the distant rivers were planted and matured there upon the desert, in invasion of all its desolation and a taunt to the sterile surroundings

We turned out the animals and let a boy drive them out to the rye grass sag while we went in for supper Inside we found more civilization than had encountered us for many a day "My eye!' said Joe, "but this beats Tennessee! Bob said nothing, and we sat down in the parlor to wait for supper, astonished at the white-washed walls, on which hung patriotic pictures—for it was war time—while there was a rag carpet on the floor, and albums, photographs, magazines, and newspapers were on the tables Our library had long consisted of the Sacramento Union, which came weekly by express and cost one dollar per copy, The spell of the hour was complete when the little maiden put her head inside the door, nodded it at us and told us to be comfortable awhile and the meal would soon be ready This apparition made Bob stroke his brown beard and roll up his blue eyes, and sent Joe in haste to the looking glass, where the little fool raked his hair around with his fingers, pulled his blue flannel shirt collar one way and the other, straightened the belt that held his butcher knife and revolver, and then looked foolish as if he thought the parlor fixings were too fine for the things he had on

At supper we were served by the young lady, while her mother dished up the savory things in the kitchen That supper can never be forgotten, for it was far ahead of anything ever seen on that patch of desert, and could only have been served there by all the enterprise and ingenuity the Yankee character is capable of. I could give the whole bill of fare now, and so could Bob and Joe to the latest moment of their lives

When evening came we were sitting with out on the ground, enjoying a smoke, and Joe inquired of Bob

"Old man' what do you think of this?'

"Struck it rich,' said Bob, and to Joe's further inquiry

"Ain't that little girl a stunner?" he made no other reply than a look, and to send the smoke curling aloft in reflective spirals that showed deep thought

Later in the evening Mrs Lytle and Nannie and her father sat with us to catch the pleasant wind I never heard Bob talk as much as he did then He laid his pipe aside, and made as many as a half dozen remarks in less than two hours

I talked with the elders mostly Joe slipped his knife and revolver out of the way, and sat down alongside Nannie, and told her about Tennessee, while she paid him back with New Hampshire Once in a while he would call on Bob, and draw him into the conversation When Bob was not within reach I heard Joe tell the girl, on the sly, that Bob was "the best old fellow in the world,' and, for the matter of that, the next morning early, having sent Joe for the animals, I overheard Bob telling her that Joe was the "handsomest and likeliest young fellow in all the mountains'

The next morning Bob weighed out of our funds sufficient gold dust to pay our fare—excellent good measure, too—and when Mrs Lytle and Nannie said they hoped we would come again he answered "Shartain, which was more than common for Bob

Before we were a mile away from the house Joe came riding up to me, and said 'Don't you see, Bill, how much store Bob sets by that little girl, Nannie?'

Toward noon, when Joe had dropped behind to tighten his saddle girth, Bob caught up with me, and said "I'm afraid, Bill we shall have to lose Joe or take in a new partner"

Well' I kept my eyes open and said nothing

Crossing Snake river and the plain beyond it, we went over a volcanic spur, and thence followed up Reynolds Creek, and climbing Oro Fino Mountain, we came down upon Jordan creek, and there we camped and prospected

Ruby City was already a mountain mining town, where they made fortunes or lost them every day speculating in 'feet' We soon caught the trick, and located feet also for we sorted the 'float rock and searched the mountain side for ledges or veins to correspond Our labors were not steadily followed Once Joe thought best to go back to Elk Horn Gulch, and see after things there, and off he went Then Bob took a notion to see after Joe, for he couldn't bear the boy out of his sight A few days after I saddled up and followed after them myself for the camp was fearfully lonesome when my partners were away so I too started for Elk Horn Gulch

Making a good drive, I reached the Lytle place late at evening and the first thing I saw was Bob and Joe, puffing their pipes in the foreground, and as much at home as could be Yet each of them wore a troubled look—I could see that—and late at night Joe came to me with

Bill you must tell the old folks what a plum, splendid old fellow Bob is cause Bob's set his heart on Nannie and you know it's time Bob was married and settled in the world'

Before I had got through pondering this Bob came along, and while he was lighting his pipe, said

"Yes see, Bill, the little 'un thinks a powerful sight of Nannie Lytle, and I've been an put in a good word for him with the old 'un Now do the like, man, and say we'll see the young folks up nicely out of next year's run, if they're willin'

I nodded and Bob drew off The next morning I made a point to tell the old lady—who was not very old—that both Bob and Joe who was not very good fellows and would have more tip top good fellows and would have a good stake another spring But she looked at me with a merry twinkle of the eye as she said "You three men do boat all The Lord only knows what she meant by it

Then I slipped into the parlor where Nannie was dusting and tiding up She blushed when she saw me coming, as if she knew what was the matter I took her hand in mine as I said to her My dear, I wish to say something to you She gave me a look out of the shyest corner of her eyes as I explained that both my friends were to be boat fellows in the world and were worthy any woman's love She drew her hand away from mine and pouted as she declared that we all three spent our time praising each other—and then she broke into a passion of tears Her mother came in and took charge of her and left me realizing that I was a very poor hand at understanding the 'indications' of a prospecting tour among women

I concluded to leave Bob and Joe to work out the problem themselves and returned Many a trip they made together or singly, while I kept camp and hunted quartz ledges on the mountain

There was one day, I well remember, when we had each been off in the mountains, I had prospected for cinnabar in the range to the south, and had been driven back by fresh Indian sign and the rumor that a miner had been found dead and scalped on the trail I was following

Joe had been over in the Owyhee district eight miles west, and came back with a similar alarm Signal fires had gleamed on the mountains beyond I met the night before, and there were other evidences of the presence of Indians

Bob had been at work on Oro Fino Mountain close at hand, and he slowly produced from his haversack specimens of quartz and handed them over to us to inspect. They were not altogether quartz, for several were small nuggets of pure mineral For a week before he had been engaged, pick in hand, examining the mountain side, unearthing the float quartz, and carefully inspecting it

We tacitly understood that he had found the vein, and had opened it and taken out these rich specimens

Joe asked "What's the name of this ledge, Bob?

'Poorman," was the reply

Bob had perpetrated a satire on the rage for fancy or high sounding names by selecting this plebian one

At daylight the next morning we were on the ground and at work opening the mine, and its wonders increased as we went down. There were occasional specimens of virgin silver, which laid in sheets and could be whittled like lead, but the simplest test of acids showed it was the genuine article

We camped there several days, and then when Saturday evening came, we moved back to town for rest, repair tools, and ask for letters and for news

That Sunday was a beautiful summer day, jubilant with sunshine The miners, with broad brimmed hats and plum costumes, were sunning themselves in the streets of Ruby, or were were haunting the gambling tables in the saloons buddenly there was a sensation A broad gathered around a horseman whose heavy spurs jingled into the hilly street like an alarm, and whose rifle was held in hand as if it had recently been in use

"We want you to raise a company and come down the creek to-morrow to hunt Indians A band of them were within two miles of Boonville last night and drove off half the stock in Jordan valley They're nearly hell—have killed three men, and we've got to clean 'em out!'

Sharp to the point. We went to our camp early in the evening, and were soon busy cleaning rifles, preparing ammunition; running bullets, and fixing for a raid upon the Indians The next day saw a busy scene in Ruby, and all along Jordan Creek. Before night there were forty men of us who sought the scene of depredations, found the Indian trail, and followed it into the mountains

We followed it until we came to lava fields and volcanic ranges to which the Indian had beguiled us in his strategy, where we could make no defense as we battled against an unseen foe They hid behind points of rock and crevices, and when pursued in force they took refuge in lava caves that were impregnable, for we could not learn their locality, and only knew that we were at the mercy of a concealed foe

The memory of that fight comes back to me in fevered dreams, and the issue of it darkened my life and beclouded my days The whole world for a while seemed as desolate to me as the volcanic ruins of those awful hills

We fought as we could, sometimes we pressed forward and then again would be driven back before an assault that could not be withstood, for we knew that the Indian foe was merciless

We three had exchanged a hand clasp as the firing commenced, and then were separated by the waves of conflict I saw my partners no more for a while, until the tide of war swept suddenly backward, and I recognized Bob as the furthermost man from me, up the infernal ravine, retreating as he could, and firing as he came

He was struck down, and I rushed toward him, when a light form near him sprung forward, and raising the prostrate body bore it rapidly toward us We made a rush to his relief, silenced the fire of the enemy for a moment and soon drew Joe—for it was he who bore Bob on his shoulders—within the shelter of a side ravine, where a trickle of water poured down its ripple of blessing I was too late to more than catch the last words of our friend We had him to rest as best we could, moistened his lips, saw those broad eyes open in recognition of us both—"Good bye, boys, you'll do the fair thing,"—and that was all

Our volunteer force had been fatally repulsed by the Indians, and the only thing to do was to retreat So we left them in their stronghold amid the lava caves, and went homeward carrying, as best we could, the lifeless form of my life's best friend, and also the wounded body of poor Joe. "I was determined, Bill, that these infernal devils shouldn't get Bob's hair!" was his sobbing remark, as he laid down his burden, and soon laid down beside it, for he proved to have been severely wounded in several places He carried no other burden afterward I never left him and he grew delirious, and soon after we reached Ruby I closed his eyes also, and the world seemed dark to me indeed

But before he died the mists cleared away, the fever went and the memory came again Then I sat with his hand in mine and heard him say that all was well We talked no business matters, but he explained to me in lowest whisper that he knew that Bob loved Nannie Lytle, and I must tell her so "And tell her that I loved her too" Poor boy, his heart's secret need not have been told, but how else could it have been told so well?

I pointed his fading sight to the shore beyond the river and it brightened as he said "since I have lain here I have seen such visions as make me believe God will let Bob and me prospect together once more in his service, I have seen Bob waiting for me and he says 'Come on, Joe it's all right'"

In the cemetery, upon the mountain side they both sleep well and sleep together They who dwell near there tell touchy their story, and it shall be told on royal marble above their graves

Nannie Lytle was among the mourners I gave her Joe's last message for Bob and from himself, and the child wept such tears as women weep for brave men and for true lovers yet I could never gather in which light she viewed them.

I could not bear to remain in the cabin where we had dwelt together I could not even work the Poorman, Bob's last and I left the effects we mutually possessed well cared for, and visited again the basin, where I sold our old claims, and then passed a few days with the Lytles in their pleasant home upon the desert The mention of either Bob or Joe would draw tears to Nannie's eyes, and I am not ashamed to say that I wept with her

Then I returned to Ruby determined to wind up all our affairs there, sell everything, and leave the scene made so sad by association

One morning I went up to the Poorman, opened the mine, and commenced work The dull ore resounded to my pick sullenly, as it know no other master than Bob, and, rich as it appeared, the task was an irksome one, until my pick turned up sheets of the native silver, and then the excitement of the work became intense

The story of the Poorman Mine was one of the wonders of that wonderful time I cannot stop to tell it, but it was trumpeted abroad and proclaimed in all the land. I became famous and the irony of the name Bob be stowed upon the mine was cause of many a jest

Speculators from afar visited me Millionaires from abroad sought my acquaintance, gamblers wished to share my luck but my only response was to ship the native metal by express and pile up rich ores on the mountain side, as if they were not worth reducing The came at last an offer that induced me to sell, and when the bargain was concluded I was foot loose and free and richer far than Bob and Joe and I had ever hoped to be in all our lives

After making a last visit to the graves on the hill side, and contracting that they should be tended and kept ever sodded and green and fresh with summer flowers I rode over the ridges and traversed the valley of desolation, where were the friends my partners had loved so well

They were all cheerful and Nannie was even like unto—singing like the lark, too as I came within hearing The autumn had followed the summer and the cheerful fire glowed in the parlor hearth as I sat around it that evening Ely had heard of my good fortune, and I was proud to see that it gave them pleasure Again I took Nannie by the hand to explain my friends' last messages, and their desire that she should benefit by their fortune but she drew her hand from mine and declared that she wanted nothing from their wealth Was she unfeeling or what could it mean? I induced her mother to accept something as from us all—the dead and I—which should answer for her marriage portion, but it was difficult to accomplish even that

I own that I felt sorrowful the next morning when I bade them all good bye and saw tears in the eyes of Mrs Lytle and Nannie, probably shed because I was the last reminder of those brave lovers who had lost, and I knew not which to pity the most—her loss or mine

The last look I gave back to them left a memory that haunts me still

I reached the Old World again after a ten years absence, by devious paths and sometimes dangerous ones I gained travelers to the Columbia river, went down it to the ocean, and, by ocean voyages, made my way to the homes of my younger years, to find them always changed and often desolate I sought out the relatives of Bob and Joe, and did the right thing toward them in the division of our wealth And I rejoice in my heart to believe that he, too, is able to know that I have done 'the fair thing'

And then my life grew weary in the midst of pleasure, and dull in the whirl of excitement I had money, and a host of friends insisted that I must "marry and settle down" There was wanting the freshness of the West, the free lom of the mountains was lacking, the spell was not there that made the desert habitable, and I longed to throw off the dull trammels of society and be again a mountaineer

An impulse to return came over me one day, and without any word of farewells I pushed on to the frontier, claimed passage by the overland stage, and went rolling through clouds of dust to the shores of the Pacific.

At Salt Lake I outfitted for Boise City. I had heard fabulous accounts of the wealth of the Poorman Was it for that I was again bound to Idaho? I could not tell, and yet my whole soul was bent on the journey as if new treasures awaited my coming to unfold themselves to the light of day

Another summer had come over the West. The verdance of the new spring had scarcely faded from the hills when I reached Boise City, and on the next morning I was on my way—I supposed to Owyhee

Was the adobe inn still standing by the desert way side? I had not asked Was I indifferent, or did I not dare to ask the question? Before, when I had passed there, it had been the miner in his woolen overshirt and broad brimmed hat, with leather leggings and jingling spurs, but I was now fashioned now, fresh from civilization, with trimmed beard and more fashionable clothes, than were known aforetime to Bob and Joe and Bill

A long morning's ride showed me the adobe dwelling, more ample in its shape than of old I knew that the flowers that looked out from the window on the sage brush plain meant that Nannie was there I was pleased to see that the trees, set two years since before the house, had been well tended, and were making a promising growth. I gave my horse to a strange boy and entered the house. I saw the mother in her kitchen, but she turned with a casual glance from the well-dressed stranger and resumed her work.

In the parlor, sewing by the window, was a form I knew It was Nannie Lytle absorbed with her needle She turned She rose to greet me, with lip compressed and with one clenched hand half raised in attitude of surprise but as her eye read the question that spoke in mine, it filled with a light I never saw there before The lips parted, the hand unclasped, and she was folded in my arms Without question or answer, save the beatings of her heart, she was mine and to the kiss that claimed more than words could give, her passionate reply came "Oh, Will! It was you that I loved only all the while"

DR GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 628 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, ills justifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of the horrible, life destroying maladies—let them consult their case be put under the special study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases, without mercury or any injurious drugs It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who in order to get all fees publishing, their skill in curing all diseases in a few days imposing upon the public by using the name of eminent physicians from Europe and other places Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self abuse This solitary vice, or indulged sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz Sallow countenance dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused ideas, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption night sweats, nervousness and frequent insanity If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of those fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sheets-to certificates, dupe the unwary one of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy too work at their trades Some are tinsmiths, sho
